What to say

"I want to buy a car that uses cleaner, cheaper, domestic electricity for even a part of its overall range. Saturn used to lease the most efficient vehicle ever built. Since GM destroyed all EV1s, GM has not shown progress on bringing an electric vehicle to market. Thank you for developing the Chevy Volt, plug-in hybrid. Please keep your word and release this car by 2010. Please give me the choice to drive on pure electricity."

What to say

"I want to buy a car that uses cleaner, cheaper, domestic electricity for even a part of its overall range. Honda has built several hybrids in the past, but has recently phased out all but one. Honda has not shown progress on bringing a plug-in hybrid or electric vehicle to market. I am not interested in Honda's fuel cell program, as it is not practical to consumers and taxpayers. Please give me the choice to drive on electricity."

What to say

"I want to buy a car that uses cleaner, cheaper, domestic electricity for even a part of its overall range. Isuzu has developed several alternatively fueled trucks, but has not brought any of these systems to production. Isuzu has also not shown progress on bringing a plug-in hybrid or electric truck to market. As Isuzu shifts away from consumer vehicles and begins to concentrate on commercial trucks, please develop vehicles that run on renewable, domestic electricity."

What to say

"I want to buy a car that uses cleaner, cheaper, domestic electricity for even a part of its overall range. Recent Toyota announcements suggest that Toyota is currently modifying a Prius to have plug-in capabilities to be available in 2010 for fleet sales. As a consumer, I too would like to purchase a plug in vehicle. Please make these available to the average consumer as soon as possible. As a consumer, I would like to see Toyota release a pure electric car, like their RAV4 EV in the near future. Thank you to Toyota for their leadership and encourage them to follow through on this commitment to automotive choices."
